the Woollen residence a few minutes later, Mr. Woollen had been dead five hours.

Fointing to the fact that Mr. Woollen had never fully recovered from the effects of an attack of influenza he sustained two or three weeks ago, relatives declare that upon his return from the eattion Saturday night he had gone to the kitchen and lighted the gas stove, either to get warm or to prepare some remedy, and dropping down on the cot, had expired when the gas, flickering out, sufficiated him. The cot was one that had been placed in the kitchen at the disposal of a negro house girl, who had been dismissed for the duration of Mrs. Woollen's absence from the city.

Mr. Woollen's home life his friends say, had been ideal, and his financial affairs are said to have been left to good condition.

Coming from a preminent family of West Tennessee, Mr. Woollen was well at known in local business circles. For two years he was hack tax collector for this section of the state, and three years ago, after leaving this position, engaged in the nutomobile business, being a member of the local firm distributing Paige automobiles. About a year ago he disposed of his interest in the automobile agency and countil the Mammobil garage. On Union avenue, which he operated until a few days ago. ALABAMA PLANTERS TO Says Wonderful Medicine HOLD 18,000 BALES

Madison county farmers are still holding about 18,000 bales of their 1318 cotton crop in spite of the recent decline. There is some uneasiness among the planters over the decline in price, but they are better fixed financially to hold their cotton than they have ever been before and it is not likely that any selling movement will start among them before there is a substantial increase in the market price of the staple.

The cardinal conducted Mr. Wilson to the naive of the cathedral, where in 1914 the Germans during their short occupation of the city placed their wounded, and then, being forced to evacuate, burned their men to death by incendiary shells that fired the roof, but did not damage the vault.

and the failing snowflakes were mixed with an almost constant dropping of fragments. Pausing a moment before the scene of the crucifix above the north door, and before the painting of the coronation of the Virgin over the central door, Mr. Wilson silently viewed the destruction wrought upon these masterpieces by the burning of the scaffolding when the Germans set fire to the roof of the edifice. Ruins of statues lie about the side door, and the great rose window, said to be the most beautiful in the world, where Field Marshal von Moltke, in 1870, sat and watched the sun set. Is shattered by shell fire until it looks like camouflage set up by the roadside. Mr. Wilson followed the cardinal to the ruins of the chapel, where old-time kings watched through the nights at the time of their anointing, and to the ruins of the miseum where priceless Flemish tapestries were ruined.
